Important Notice.

The attention of Eastern and Western flour dealers is invited to the above card, believing that I can make it a paying business for them to send me their orders for Flour when they have occasion to buy in Minneapolis.

I have been engaged in milling business in North Iowa over ten years, and claim to be an expert judge of Flour, and know exactly where to find what is wanted.

I have the better grades of Minneapolis Flour put up in 49 and 98 lb. sacks, and am in position to fill orders on short notice. My brands of Flour are :

"ALLER BESTE," XXXX Family Flour.

"MUSKEGET," Straight Grade Roller Process.

"MIACOMET," Fancy Patent Hungarian Process.

And are as fine quality as any Flour made in Minnesota.

The above brands of Flour are being sold by seventy-two stores in Minneapolis, whose names appear in the following list.

Have secured the General Agency for the West and Northwest of M. Briggs & Son's, Rochester, N. Y., Fire and Burglar-Proof Safes, Vaults, etc., well-known throughout New York and New England as

THE VERY BEST SAFE MADE.

MORE THAN 25 PER CENT. OF THE BRIGG'S SAFES ARE USED BY BANKS, BANKERS, STATE, COUNTY AND CITY TREASURIES AND LARGE CORPORATIONS IN ALL PARTS OF THE UNION.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

Being a member of the Executive Committee of the State Bank of Iowa, I investigated to a considerable exient the merits of several Safes claimed to be the best in the country, the manufacturers of which were making great efforts to have their respective work adopted by us. I purchased your safe and regard it as the best protection I have ever seen.

Wm. S. Smith, Pres't State Bank, Oskaloosa, Ia.

At the organization of our Bank a committee was appointed from our most efficient business men to procure a suitable vault and safe. After a careful examination of various manufactures and consultation with several prominent Bank officers, they decided to purchase your safe, doors and locks. All who have examined them are pleased with the selection and we have the strongest confidence in their security and protection.

L. C. McIntyre, Cashier 1st National Bank, Romeo, Mich.

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK, AUG. 5th, 1881.

We have been manufacturing Fire and Burglar-Proof Safes at Rochester, New York, for over a quarter of a century. Many of them have gone through severe fires, and have been attacked by burglars, and not one of them ever failed to preserve its contents.

Sworn to before me, 5th day of August, A. D. 1881. M. BRIGGS & SON.

INTRODUCTORY.

Four years ago the first edition of the Minnesota State Gazetteer and Business Directory was presented to the public and received with decided favor. The work was felt to be a necessity and the large number of subscribers and patrons and their perfect satisfaction amply confirmed this opinion. In accordance with the original intention to make the work a permanent biennial production which would fully meet the wants of the business community, and protect them from the many schemes which under the name of State and other directories were being undertaken by unscrupulous persons to swindle the citizens and reap a temporary harvest of profit, a second edition was issued in 1880, with which was incorporared a Gazetteer and Business Directory of Dakota Territory, which book also met with a flattering reception. The present work is placed before the public with the confident assurance that it will meet their approval. It has been prepared entirely from late and original sources of information, and everything, both as regards descriptive matter and business data has been procured expressly for the work, and many new and valuble features will be found in the volume. The wonderfully large increase in the population and business interests of the state and territory has made the labor and expense of producing this volume much greater than that of any previous issue. The actual increase in the size of the book is about three hundred pages or nearly one fourth larger than the 1880 work. This fact speaks for itself, the conclusion of course being that a proportionate increase has been witnessed in Minnesota and Dakota. In due course a fourth issue of the Gazetteer will be prepared in which still further improvements will be conscientiously attempted.

Thanks are tendered to all who have assisted in the preparation of the work and to those who have so liberally bestowed their patronage upon it. In conclusion the publishers desire to congratulate the citizens on the continued steady and rapid increase of the industries, wealth and population of the state and territory.

MINNESOTA.

DESCRIPTIVE SKETCH,

Prepared by H. H. YOUNG, Secretary of the State Board of Immigration, St. Paul.

ITS LOCATION AND BOUNDARIES.

The State of Minnesota occupies the most eligible position of any inland State of the American Union, being located nearly in the centre of the continent, and upon the summit of the dividing ridge which separates the waters of the great interior basin that flow southward, from those which flow northerly. It extends from 43½ to 49 degrees north latitude, and from the 90th to the 97th meridian of longitude west of Greenwich, having a length of about 375 miles north and south, and a mean breadth of, say, 250 miles. It is bounded on the north by the Dominion of Canada, on the east by Lake Superior and the State of Wisconsin, on the south by Iowa, and on the west by Dakota territory. Its eastern boundary line, for about two-thirds the length of the State, is formed by the Mississippi river and its eastern confluent, the St. Croix; and the Red River of the North constitutes the north half of the line between Minnesota and Dakota. Its northern boundary is, likewise, defined by the Rainy Lake and Pigeon rivers throughout about three-fourths of its extent; thus giving the State a water frontage on three sides, having an aggregate length of nearly 1,000 miles, of which about two-thirds is on navigable waters.

THE SURFACE—HOW DIVERSIFIED.

The surface of Minnesota is greatly diversified, although it nowhere approaches what is entitled to be called mountainous. North of Lake Superior is a granite uplift, which is frequently quite rugged and, together with about two-thirds of the eastern part of the drift deposit extending westward from this lake more than three-fourths the distance across the State and forming the height of land separating the waters of the Mississippi system from those which flow northward, is seamed in all directions, and at frequently recurring intervals, with water-courses. In many instances the declivities formed by this hydraulic agency are quite steep, and they occasionally rise to the height of several hundred feet above the level of the adjacent valleys. This characteristic grows less marked as one proceeds westward from the lake, and disappears almost wholly before the distance across is half accomplished, terminating finally, a few miles westward of the line of Red Lake, in a level plain which forms the wide savanna known as Red River valley. There is also some hilly country on the divide separating the tributaries of the Mississippi from those of the Minnesota, but with the exception of these the surface of the State is generally undulating. The timbered region proper is confined to that part of the State lying east of and including the counties of Beltrami, Cass, Morrison, Benton, Sherburne, and Anoka, and it is within this district that the pine forests are found. A branch or spur of this, however, extends westward and southward, and covers a considerable part of the counties of Wright, Hennepin, Carver, Scott, Le Sueur, Rice, Steele, Waseca, and Blue Earth, and reaches here and there into some of the adjoining counties. There are also fringes of timber along most of the streams, especially the larger rivers, and groves in the vicinity of the lakes. Some of these groves cover an area of several hundred acres, though for the most part they are of limited extent. They are very frequent, and occasionally form almost continuous chains on the summits of the divides, where the small lakes are thickly grouped.

AREA AND WATER SURFACE.

It is estimated that Minnesota has an area of 53,459,840 acres, without including that part of Lake Superior which is allotted to its jurisdiction, and that fully 2,700,000 acres of this are covered by lakes. There are upwards of 7,000 of these lakes of sufficient size to be measured and marked on the township plats by the Government surveyors, and among them are several really magnificent bodies of water. For instance, Red Lake has a surface of 340,000 acres, Mille Lacs 130,000, Leech Lake 114,000, Winnebagoshish 56,000, Minnetonka 16,000, and half a score of others upwards of 5,000. The whole 7,000 will average upwards of 400 acres each in extent. Nearly all of them have sandy or pebbly bottoms and high firm shores, permitting an approach, dry-shod, to the water's edge, and for the most part they have a depth of from three to eight fathoms, thus affording safe habitations for the millions of fish with which they abound. The waters are, in nearly every instance, cool and pure, and free from both lime and alkali. These lakes are natural reservoirs for thousands of streams which flow down the adjacent declivities, furrowing their sides into wide, gently sloping valleys, and giving them the billowy appearance which adds attraction to the landscape, while it improves the agricultural facilities. These water-courses differ, of course, in size, from that of the majestic Mississippi to the tiniest rivulet, but there are few, if any, of them that finish their career without the occurrence of rapids or cascades along their course, making them available for manufacturing purposes. Of the entire land surface of Minnesota, there is very little, comparatively, not available for agricultural purposes, and this is generally in the timbered region and, perhaps, quite as profitably productive.

CLIMATE AND TEMPERATURE.

Strangers to Minnesota frequently express surprise on hearing those who live in the State declare that it has an agreeable climate. They cannot conceive that a climate can be endurable where the mercury during the winter months is liable to shrink to 20 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, and range from that to 40 or 50 above; and where, during the most equable season, the range of the thermometer is through 40 degrees, and often very sudden. But it is true, nevertheless, that this climate is pleasant and healthy, as the experience of thousands of people who have lived here for years can attest. The reason for this is that the atmosphere is light and dry, and its temperature does not, therefore, affect that of the body as quickly and sensibly as the moister air of lower or more southerly regions. It does not absorb the heat from the body, and outdoor work is performed by mechanics with very little personal inconvenience when the mercury stands at 10 or 12 degrees below zero. Indeed, the testimony of working people generally is that less time is lost here because of inclement weather than in regions further south. The intensely cold intervals are of rare occurrence and seldom continue for more than a day or two. During a period of six years the mean winter temperature, as reported by the U. S. Signal Service officer stationed at St. Paul, was 18 degrees, 45 minutes above zero; the average for the spring months, 45 degrees, 50 minutes; that of the summer months, 70 degrees, 49 minutes; and for the autumn months, 44 degrees, 14 minutes. This included two very cold winters, when the extremes attained were respectively 32 and 39 degrees below zero. In summer the nights are almost always cool, making it the rule that refreshing sleep is enjoyed, and one rises invigorated and renewed even in the hottest weather. The atmosphere is also nearly always in motion, and foggy or sultry days are almost unknown. As a rule the weather is clear during the day, and especially so in summer and autumn seasons. The following table shows the number of fair and clear days during the several seasons of the six years mentioned:

	1875.	1876.	1877.	1878.	1879.	1880.	Average.
Winter.....	56	66	57	50	60	69	59 2-3
Spring.....	54	57	58	65	68	65	61 1-6
Summer.....	77	86	89	73	72	76	78 5-6
Fall.....	80	75	63	71	74	59	70 1-3
During year	267	284	267	259	274	269	270

It is hardly probable that any region on the American continent has a less number of cloudy or rainy days than is here shown to fall to the lot of Minnesota, fully three-fourths of each year being officially reported to be clear or fair. And yet the climate is by no means arid, for even in summer the rain storms are frequent, but they nearly all occur at night.

LENGTH OF THE SEASONS.

Not only is the temperature of Minnesota but little colder than that of other northern States of the Union, but there is a scarcely perceptible difference in the length of the seasons. These begin at about the same time as in other States north of the 39th parallel, and the seed time and harvest of this higher latitude are but a few days later than those of Pennsylvania, Ohio or Missouri. Generally the winter does not set in so early here as in the more southerly States, for it is usually preceded by Indian summer, which commences about the middle of October and lasts from four to six weeks, sometimes continuing until the middle of December. During this period the days are warm and pleasant and the nights frosty, but the cold is not severe enough to interfere with plowing and other seasonable farm occupations, and it is seldom that the skies are overcast with clouds. It is the pleasantest season of the year.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

Though scarcely more than 25 years have elapsed since the settlement of Minnesota began, or, indeed, since the region was believed to be susceptible of profitable cultivation, it has been known to the civilized world since 1665. French fur traders had at that early day penetrated to this heart of the continent by way of the great lakes, and 14 years later Sieur Du Luth established a military and trading post at the western extremity of Lake Superior, which was maintained almost constantly from that time until after the beginning of the present century. In 1680 Louis Hennepin, a Franciscan missionary, crossed Illinois from the head of Lake Michigan, and coming up the Mississippi river discovered the falls of St. Anthony, to which he gave the name they still bear. In 1690 Messieurs Perot, Le Sueur, Marest and their companions took possession of the country in the name of the king of France, and La Sueur subsequently established a trading post on Blue Earth river, and is believed to have journeyed as far west as the Yellow Medicine river. During the succeeding century the country was visited by a considerable number of French adventurers and traders, and also by several English explorers, and in 1763 one Jonathan Carver, of Connecticut, commissioned by the English government, led an exploring expedition across Wisconsin into this territory and claimed to have made a treaty with the Sioux Indians at a cave on the Mississippi river, near the present site of St. Paul.

In 1804 the United States government obtained a cession of all this region west of the Mississippi from Spain, to which power the French title had been previously transferred, and the following year sent Capt. Z. M. Pike, with a small force to take possession of it. This officer ascended the Mississippi to Leech Lake, and spent considerable time within the limits of the present State, and like all who had preceded him from the earliest period mentioned, wrote glowing descriptions of the country, dwelling especially upon the salubrity of its climate and fertility of the soil. After his day, however, a different opinion of the country seems to have obtained currency, until some 60 years ago it had quite generally come to be regarded as an inhospitable region, fit only for the occupation of trappers and Indians and their scarcely less wild game. This impression was no doubt purposely created by the fur dealers and trappers themselves with a view to deter settlers from encroaching upon a domain that yielded most abundant and profitable returns for their labor; and as a further protection of their interests they spread stories, which became generally believed, that the Sioux Indians, who inhabited this region, were of all American Indians the most unconquerable and relentlessly cruel.

As late as 1849, when Minnesota was provided with a territorial government, the idea was still quite prevalent that it could never become an agricultural region nor support a greater population than those required in its lumbering business and engaged in trapping for furs. Occasionally statements were published to the effect that somebody had succeeded in growing spring wheat or flint corn or potatoes within the territory; but such statements were hardly credited except by thoroughly well informed people. It was a fact, nevertheless, that agriculture had even at that early date been for years successfully carried on here, though only to a limited extent, and that all intelligent persons who had resided any considerable time in the territory were convinced that it was destined at some not very remote future period to become important as an agricultural district. This belief gradually gained adherents, and occasional immigrants wended their way thither, determined to found homes for themselves and try the experiment of developing the resources of the country in this direction. Their success induced others to follow, and though the influx was slow it continued to gather volume, until from 1849 to 1850 the population increased from 4,940 to 6,077.

THE POPULATION.

In 1858 the territory was admitted into the Union as a State, claiming a white population of 140,000, and two years afterwards, when the United States census was taken, its white inhabitants were found to have increased to 172,023, notwithstanding that the financial depression of 1857 had tended greatly to retard the settlement of all the new States by occasioning a complete suspension of building railroads and prosecuting other enterprises conducive to the opening up of new countries.

The occurrence of the war of rebellion in 1861 and the Sioux Indian massacre of 1862 interfered still further with the rapid peopling of the new State. But despite these adverse circumstances Minnesota's white population in 1865 was found to be 250,099, and its claims to agricultural excellence and healthfulness were by this time so fully established and generally recognized that its future rapid growth was apparently assured. In 1870 its population had increased to 439,407, in 1875, to 597,407; in 1880, to 780,807, and it is believed that now in May, 1882, it will number upwards of 1,000,000, and the tide of immigration now pouring into the State is greatly in excess of that of any former period.

BY WHOM IT IS PEOPLED.

The present population of Minnesota is made up of elements best calculated to promote the development of the State, and these are associated in proportions to insure competition and enterprise. Of those born out of the State very nearly half are natives of other States of the Union or of Canada, and of the foreign born much the larger proportion are from Northern Europe. The following tabular statement is furnished by the Census Bureau of the United States :

Total foreign born inhabitants 267,676, and total population 780,807. The number of Indians in the State is not included in the above. It will hardly exceed 2,500, nearly all of whom are Chippewas, and live on four reservations in the northern part of the State. There are some two or three dozen Sioux Indians and half a dozen families of Winnebagoes remaining in the State. They are civilized, and maintain themselves by laboring at various occupations, never interfering with the whites or giving trouble.

COMMERCIAL FACILITIES.

The situation of Minnesota at the head of navigation on the Mississippi river, the great lakes, and the Red River of the North, places her in possession of enviable natural commercial facilities, the importance of which was recognized by the French explorers who visited this country two hundred years ago, and has been the subject of frequent comment by more recent writers. The two former routes enable her, with a single transfer of cargo, to reach tide water and have free access to the markets of the world, by the cheapest possible means of transportation; and through the latter, steamers may ply between points on her western border and the vast and fertile territory of the northwest, watered by the Assiniboine and Saskatchewan rivers, together with the forest countries bordering on Lakes Winnipeg and Manitoba. Through this latter channel, also, the greater portion of the products of all that extensive region, and of the mineral districts on the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains, north of the British line, must be brought to the western boundaries of Minnesota, to be conveyed overland across its domain and reshipped to foreign markets through the great lakes or by way of the Mississippi. Unless, indeed, the scheme of establishing a line of steamers to ply between Fort York, on Hudson Bay, and Liverpool be successful (which is hardly credible), and in that case the Red river puts Minnesota in close proximity to that new oceanic route, and affords her opportunity to share in its advantages. It is true that these water-routes will not be constantly available, but the benefits accruing from their use during five or six months of each year can hardly be estimated. They will not only admit of merchandise being carried over them at cheap rates, but will exert a powerful influence in keeping rates of freight by railway at reasonable figures.

EXTERIOR RAILWAY LINES.

Besides these natural channels for transportation, Minnesota is already provided with railway facilities hardly excelled by those of her older sister states. Four lines of well built road, abundantly furnished with rolling-stock, and ably managed, connect her with Milwaukee and Chicago, and with the entire system of railways east of the Mississippi river: two other lines bring her into communication with the southern and southwestern states and territories, and, by way of the Central Pacific, with California and other places on the Pacific slope. The Northern Pacific, which already extends nearly one-third of the way through Montana territory, and opens up an available route to the mines and grazing ranches of that region, will soon be finished through to the Pacific coast, and become the shortest, cheapest, and speediest trans-continental route, over which a considerable share of the commerce of both America and Europe with eastern Asia, together with that of the western coast of North America north of California, must be carried. But this is only one of six roads that already extend to a greater or less distance west of the western limits of the state, and which are being further extended every season; while the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba reaches out northwesterly, becoming a link of the Canadian Pacific and its branches, and bringing the country which the latter traverses tributary to Minnesota.

It would seem that these exterior railroad routes are already sufficiently numerous to accommodate the trade of the country, but new lines are being constantly projected, and the experience of the past leaves us little room to doubt that the proposed roads will be begun at an early day, and pushed forward rapidly. One of the most important of these prospective roads is from Duluth along the south shore of Lake Superior to Sault St. Mary, to connect with a line from the opposite shore of that strait to Montreal, and to be intersected by a line from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Bayfield, Wisconsin, which is already well advanced towards completion. Another line to Milwaukee and Chicago is also talked of, but the route does not seem to be definitely determined, nor has the project yet assumed shape to impress one with the belief that it will be carried into execution very soon. There are, however, two proposed lines extending into Iowa, and one other into Dakota, of the speedy prosecution of which there seems little room to doubt.

RAILROADS WITHIN THE STATE.

Connecting with these various outside railroad lines, Minnesota has a magnificent internal system of roads. Seven lines cross the state from east to west, and four of these are connected by lateral branches running nearly north and south. With the exception of the Northwestern, Southern Minnesota, and Northern Pacific, these lines all radiate from St. Paul and Minneapolis, and the three named communicate with those cities by lines partly crossing the state in the opposite direction. There is also a line running north from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Duluth, connecting those cities with Lake Superior by the shortest route. The entire length of railways built and in operation in the state on January 1, 1882, was 2,369 miles, and the work of grading for new and branch lines is still going on, so that by the close of the current year it is likely that this will be increased by fully 150 miles of new road. Among the new roads proposed, some of which are now in course of construction, is one line from Wadena (where it branches from the Northern Pacific), by the way of Fergus Falls, crossing the state line at Breckenridge, and extending thence across Dakota to the Missouri; another from Fergus Falls to Pelican Rapids; another from Morris, by way of Sauk Centre, to Little Falls, and thence eastward to intersect the St. Paul & Duluth at some point not yet determined; another from St. Cloud east to Pine City; another (the Northern Pacific branch line), from St. Cloud to St. Paul; the continuation of the western branch of the Minneapolis and St. Louis to the state line in the southwestern part of the state, and a line from Duluth to Crookston. There are, besides these, several short branch lines in different parts of the state talked of, and if the policy hitherto pursued by the companies is continued, these will generally, no doubt, be built without unnecessary delay. Indeed, from the experience of the past four or five years, there is reason to believe that every portion of Minnesota will possess ample railroad facilities within the next ten years, and should the commercial necessities of the future require it, the upper Mississippi, the Minnesota, the Red river above Moorhead, and portions of the upper St. Croix, are susceptible of being made navigable for long stretches at comparatively slight expense, and a number of the larger lakes will be available for the accommodation of local traffic.

COMMERCE OF THE STATE.

The commerce of Minnesota is already a very important element of her prosperity and influence. The exports of her own products of wheat, flour and lumber alone last year are estimated to have aggregated at least $50,000,000, and in addition to these she shipped considerable corn, oats, hay, potatoes, wool, butter, eggs, cheese, honey, pork, bacon, etc., besides horses, cattle, sheep, hogs; and machinery, furniture and other manufactured articles: and a by no means insignificant quantity of hides and pelts. These latter items will probably increase the total value of her exports to upwards of $100,000,000. We may add to this at least $25,000,000 for the value of articles produced elsewhere and purchased in and subsequently reshipped from the State, as, for instance, the wheat, cattle and other agricultural products of Dakota and Montana. The latest published statistics estimate the imports of the entire State, consisting chiefly of dry goods, groceries, fruits, drugs, wearing apparel, furniture, paper, books, etc., at $115,000,000, of which about one-fifth was afterwards exported to Dakota and other localities west of this State. There is also a large trade already carried on across the State with localities beyond, especially with Manitoba and Montana, which pays tribute here for handling and conveyance. Considering the situation of the State and the commercial facilities, natural and artificial, above alluded to, together with its resources and advantages for manufacturing, to be hereafter mentioned, the conclusion is only rational that it is hardly possible to exaggerate the importance of its traffic and transportation in the early future. It may be truthfully called the natural gateway of the commerce of the northern half of both hemispheres.

ITS MANUFACTURING FACILITIES AND FACTORIES.

The myriads of water courses which abound in every part of the State, most of which have a bountiful supply of water even in dry seasons, and on all of which cascades or rapids occur, furnish an aggregate hydraulic power the force of which almost surpasses computation. The principal of these is St. Anthony Falls, on the Mississippi river, at Minneapolis, which is estimated to equal 125,000 horse power, but the rapids of the St. Croix afford a force nearly if not fully as great, and another scarcely inferior is found on the St. Louis river at Knife Falls.

The upper Minnesota river affords two splendid water powers, Red river three and the upper Mississippi four. On the smaller rivers, as for instance, the Cannon, Zumbrota, Root, Le Sueur, Blue Earth, Cottonwood, Des Moines, Red Wood, Yellow Medicine, Rock, Lac Qui Parle, Chippewa, Pomme de Terre, Buffalo, Red Lake, Big Fork, Little Fork, Snake, Kettle, Rum, Crow, etc., there are usually several falls or rapids furnishing power for mills with from 6 to 12 run of burrs, or for other machinery, and there is hardly a stream in the State that does not afford enough power for a mill of ordinary capacity. In short, every neighborhood in the State is provided with mechanical force sufficient for its local needs, and many of them have enough to render them capable of becoming important manufacturing centres.

Quite a number of these water powers, especially in the southeastern part of the State, are already improved, as will be seen by a perusal of the following pages, and many of the flouring mills of Minnesota are as complete, expensive and magnificent structures of the kind as can be found on this continent, if not in the world, and the flour they produce stands unrivaled in the markets of either hemisphere. There are also a number of extensively equipped saw-mills in Minnesota, especially in Minneapolis, on the Croix and on the streams in the part of the State lying between these two rivers. The quantity of lumber, laths and shingles annually manufactured reaches a value of many millions of dollars. There are also a number of manufactories of farm machinery, wagons, furniture, bricks, pottery, barrels, pails, tubs, etc., and one very complete establishment for making sugar and syrup of amber cane, a variety of imphee. The materials made up in these are for the most part produced in the State, but besides them there are a score or two of machine shops, several steam engine factories, two or more extensive boot and shoe factories, and a great variety of lesser establishments.

MATERIALS FOR MANUFACTURE.

The manufacturing facilities of Minnesota are not confined, however, to her endowment by nature with hydraulic power. She produces, also, the materials on which this power may be profitably employed, and that, too, in the immediate vicinities where it is located. Her pine forests yield timber for millions of feet of lumber and for vast quantities of laths, pickets, shingles, etc., annually, while her magnificent cottonwood, linden, maple, ash and other varieties of deciduous trees afford a supply of material for divers other kinds of manufactures of wood and furnish employment to numerous saw-mills, planing mills, cooper shops, furniture factories, farm machinery factories, carriage shops, etc., a large number of which are already in operation. Her immense deposits of clay, some of which are of very fine quality, yield the materials for numerous brickyards, potteries, etc., and some of the brick and much of the pottery already manufactured in the State equals any that is to be had elsewhere. It is, perhaps, fair to say that the terra cotta ware now manufactured in St. Paul is in every respect as good as can be made. There are also several magnificent quarries of building stone along the Minnesota, Mississippi and St. Croix rivers and about the shores of Lake Superior, which furnish an inexhaustible supply and are conveniently situated for transportation, and in the southwestern part of the State are immense deposits of a reddish hued rock, susceptible of fine polish and equal to marble for mantels, table tops, trimmings for doors, windows, etc. Limestone is found in many localities, from which an excellent quality of this useful material is obtained.

There are several slate quarries also, and those who have inspected them, agree in asserting that the quality of the material is sufficiently good to make them very valuable. Iron ore, said to be equal to that of Sweden, is claimed to be found in abundance north of Lake Superior, and in the same locality a superior quality of copper is found. It is likewise claimed that mines of silver exist in that vicinity and in various places along Rainy Lake river and about Lake of the Woods, which it is believed will pay well when facilities of transportation are extended to that region. Gold has also been found in small quantities in the beds of several streams in the State, notably in the south fork of the Zumbro river, and on the islands in Lake of the Woods and in the Rainy Lake region, but it is doubtful if the quantity to be obtained from these sources will ever pay for the labor and expense of securing it. Materials for making the coarser varieties of paper exist in abundance in nearly all the timbered region of the State, and there are immense dunes of white sand, suitable for making glass, in several localities along the Mississippi, especially in the vicinity of Red Wing.

MATERIALS PRODUCED BY CULTIVATION.

Besides these materials which nature has bountifully supplied, unaided by human industry, Minnesota is found capable of producing a number of others in sufficient quanties to keep a multitude of factories employed. Already her annual crop of wheat reaches nearly, if not fully, 50,000,000 bushels, very much of which is now ground in her numerous, extensive and fully equipped flouring mills, and with each recurring season this product must increase until the entire cultivatable area of the State is brought into subjection to the husbandman. Amber sugar cane, a variety of sorghum or imphee, is also grown here to perfection in constantly increasing quantities, and one large and extensive factory is already in operation at Faribault in extracting its juice and reducing it to syrup and sugar, not a whit inferior to that obtained from the ribbon cane of Louisiana. This industry is bound to increase until it becomes one of the most important of the State. Flax and hemp of best quality grow here luxuriantly, and there is every prospect that the manufacture of linen, cordage, etc., will afford opportunity at an early day for the profitable employment of capital and labor. Butter and cheese are now produced in considerable quantities, and there are already a few small woolen mills and tanneries, but these may and will be almost infinitely increased as the State develops and her resources are fully drawn upon by the demands of commerce; and no doubt the State will hereafter be found capable of yielding yet other products in sufficient quantities to justify the erection of manufactories in her territory by which they can be reduced to marketable forms, thus enabling her people to gain the largest possible profit on their productions. The very circumstance of her having the facilities of manufacturing so convenient will stimulate her enterprising citizens to produce materials for their employment to the full extent ultimately of her resources and the demands for consumption and export.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

Except her lumbering business and the manufacture of flour, the energies of the people of Minnesota have up till the present time been mainly directed to agriculture. Her total cultivated area in 1881, according to the report of the Commissioner of Statistics, was 4,729,536 acres, and the number of farms 81,089. As the average Minnesota farm is about 200 acres in extent, it is clear that only something like one-fourth of each has yet been improved, and every year will add largely to the cultivated area of these, while at the same time increasing the number by from 5,000 to 6,000. The following tabular statement shows the quantities of the several kinds of produce as reported to the State Statistician; but careful observation, continued for a number of years, has fully demonstrated to the writer that these reports are at least 25 per cent. below the truth. This opinion is also entertained by the Statistician himself, and he devotes five pages of his last year's report to prove it well founded:

	Acres.	Bushels.
Wheat	2,961,842	39,399,068

The total area devoted to other crops was 24,844 acres. Wild hay cut, 1,263,472 tons; number of apple trees growing, 1,032,315; do. bearing, 255,133; apples produced, 147,803 bushels; grape vines bearing, 50,446; grapes produced, 141,731 pounds; strawberries 310,006 quarts; tobacco, 65,089 pounds; honey, 221,225 pounds; maple syrup, 12,499 gallons; do. sugar, 47,712 pounds; butter, 15,693,283 pounds; cheese, 417,994 pounds; wool, 1,047,985 pounds; horses of all ages, 263,061; milch cows, 266,678; other meat cattle, 317,895; mules and asses, 9,415; sheep, 267,315; hogs, 238,987.

HEALTHFULNESS OF MINNESOTA.

That the climate of Minnesota is healthful is attested by thousands of persons who, coming hither as invalids, and in many instances apparently suffering from pulmonary ailments well advanced towards their final stages, have fully recovered and are to-day as well as they ever were. This peculiar salubrity of the climate is very generally understood throughout this country and Canada, and the State is visited every season by multitudes of sick people, hoping to be benefited by breathing its pure air. Many of these recover, but too large a proportion delay the journey until it is too late for a cure to be effected, and dying here soon after their arrival swell the lists of deaths and make the vital statistics an unfair representation of the annual mortality. For instance, in 1881 there were 9,802 deaths in the State, which is equal to 1 in every 85 of the inhabitants. Fully 20 per cent. of these, however, were of persons who came here as invalids, with vitality too much exhausted to be permanently benefited by the change, and their decease ought not, therefore, to be charged in the account. Deduct these and the annual death-rate is reduced to 1 in 109 of the population. This is still excessive if perfect fairness is aimed at, for it must not be overlooked that the immigrants for that year numbered about 63,000, many of whom were but poorly housed and suffered greatly from exposure in a climate to which they were unaccustomed. This was especially true of the children and aged people among them. The rate of 1 death to every 120 inhabitants is believed to be a fair statement of the average mortality in the State, and is, indeed, above the average rate in those of the older counties, which receive but few immigrants and are rarely visited by invalids seeking restoration to health.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

The assessed value of taxable property, both personal and real, affords, perhaps, a more satisfactory indication of the development of the State than can be derived from even its agricultural statistics, and we therefore append the following from the annual report of the State Auditor:

CONCLUDING REMARKS.

The development of Minnesota, which the succeeding pages will more fully disclose, has been astonishingly rapid, but never within its history has it made such great strides as since the opening of the present decade. Its population is being added to now by immigration at the rate of upwards of 50,000 a year, a large proportion of whom come from the older States, and are not only enterprising but bring with them considerable amounts of capital. There are also a good many intelligent German farmers coming into the State now, most of whom are well provided with means and are industrious and enterprising. The Swedes and Norwegians, too, who comprise a large share of the present population, flock hither in undiminished numbers, and though they do not generally bring much money or property, are energetic and ambitious, and the rapid improvement of the State is in a great measure due to their untiring industry and perseverance.

There is every reason to believe that the progress of the State during the next ten years will surpass anything hitherto witnessed, even in this land of wonderful growth.

Manufacturers of all kinds of Shipping and Household Cans, including the celebrated for which we are the sole manufacturers in the West. Patented April 22, 1879, and Oct. 5, 1880.

These cans, which are made for family use, are encased in light, smooth wood; the ends are held firmly together by neat metallic seams or joints; the hoops are wrapped with metal, which increases its strength. In their construction we use no nails or screws, consequently avoid all danger of splitting the casings, which can shrink or swell as occasion requires. The one-gallon cans are supplied with a neat, substantial handle, which has always been a wanting feature in all cans. We also attach to every can without extra charge one of the Eureka Lamp Fillers. This filler is but a recent invention, and is the only article for the prevention of spilling oil that is made. They fit any can, and can be taken off or put on as occasion may require. Every can is thoroughly tested and warranted. We feel confident in presenting this can to you, and are assured it will give the greatest satisfaction, a solution which is to be found in the fact of their CHEAPNESS, strength, simplicity of construction and beauty of finish. Write for our price and discount to large buyers.

Is by all odds the best road for you to take when traveling in either direction between

Only Company who own Through Unbroken Lines from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago.

Between which points it offers no less than

line of the St. V. div. St. P., M. & M. Ry, 300 miles northwest of Minneapolis, on the direct line of travel to Manitoba and British North America. It has witnessed a remarkable growth, and is destined to become a most important point, as a large area of the finest agricultural section of the United States is tributory to its commerce. This city, the site of which a decade ago was a field of wheat, we now find teeming with factories, mills, stores, shops and dwellings. The excellent power furnished by Red Lake river is utilized, although not to its full extent. Good opportunities are presented for the establishment of any enterprise to which good power is a requisite. Here are five churches, good graded school, two banks, the First National and Merchants', with a total capital of $125,000, and two newspapers, the Chronicle and Polk county Journal. The principal buildings are the First National bank and the court house, recently erected at a cost of $10,000 and $25,000 respectively. The chief shipment is wheat, and land in the vicinity can be obtained at from $5 to $20 per acre. Exp., Am. Tel., W. U. Mail, daily. E. M. Welsh, postmaster.

DULUTH. The progress which this Lake Superior port and railroad terminus has made in the past year shows that it will certainly hold the first rank as a shipping port of this great lake. The population has increased from 3,500 to 7,000 in the past year and a half, and is increasing very rapidly.

The railroads which now have their termini here are advancing the interests of the city very materially. The St. P. & D. and the N. P. R. Rs. both contribute largely. The D. & W. R. R., now being built, will bring by the most direct route the immense cereal productions from the great grain growing section, the Northwest, to be shipped east by boat. Iron in immense quantities is found 90 miles north of this city in the Vermillion district. It is also now almost certain that the M. & St. L. Ry will be extended to this place, and several other roads are projected.

Duluth is the county seat of St. Louis county, and is situated on the southwestern shore of Lake Superior, 150 miles northeast of St. Paul. The county authorities are erecting a $15,000 jail here, and a splendid court house is one of the near possibilities. During 1881 she shipped to eastern points 625,776 barrels of flour and 3,562,284 bushels of grain of all kinds, not to mention general merchandise. During the same time 361,609,832 pounds of freight were received via N. P., St. P. & D. and M. & St. L. R. Rs. Total number of pounds of freight forwarded by lake from January, 1881, to January, 1882, was 347,667,727, and forwarded by rail 498,058,006.

To show how the commerce of the port has kept pace with the growth in this direction we give the following figures: In 1876 the receipts of merchandise by lake were 77,510,436 pounds; in 1878, 154,704,305 pounds; in 1880, 266,247,108 pounds; in 1881, 591,198,468 pounds. The shipments of wheat from this port were, in 1876, 1,382,901 bushels; in 1880, 2,028,365 bushels; in 1881, 3,562,284 bushels. The receipts of coal at this port in 1878 were 31,013 tons; in 1880, 70,000 tons; in 1881, 163,000 tons, an amount equivalent to 204 cargoes, figuring an average cargo at 800 tons, or 16,300 car loads, giving 10 tons to a car. In the transactions of our banks a similar increase is noted. In 1880 the transactions of the American Exchange bank and Bell & Eyster's banking house were $23,519,361 85, in 1881, $52,521,168 64, these figures in both cases including, as is customary, both sides of the ledger. The deposits of the two banks are now in the neighborhood of $550,000.

The custom house collections from all sources were for the year $12,638 80, an increase of $4,000 over 1880.

Duluth's grain trade is increasing at a rapid rate and there are here one elevator with a capacity for 560,000 bushels, another with a capacity for 1,000,000 bushels, and a still larger one is at present being built which will have storage room for 1,100,000 bushels. There are 14 large steam saw-mills in Duluth and its immediate vicinity with a capacity for cutting 175,000,000 feet of logs annually. The pineries on the streams flowing into Duluth harbor are estimated to contain from 4,000,000,000 to 6,000,000,000 feet, and are almost untouched as yet. During the present winter of 1881–2, 190,000,000 feet of logs will be cut by the various firms located here. The number of men employed by these lumbering firms at present writing is fully 2,000. Most of the lumber manufactured here is shipped west.

An immense iron business is fast being developed here by the Duluth Iron Co, who employ 250 men, the larger number of whom are engaged in the manufacture of charcoal for the furnaces. The amount of iron manufactured during the year was 6,500 tons.

The financial standing of the city is in an excellent condition. The banking establishments, three in number, are a credit to the place. Several good hotels furnish accommodation for the traveling public. A tannery is doing a large and lucrative business. The manufacture and shipping of salt is among the leading industries. The largest brewery in the northwest is located here. The press is well represented by the Lake Superior News, a wide awake and energetic weekly, and the Duluth Tribune. The fisheries are one of the leading enterprises of the city and there are two firms engaged in the business. There are numerous fine business blocks here, notably among others the Hunter and Clark blocks (both built of brown stone), the Banning, Smith, Hayes, Edmunds and Ray blocks. During 1881, $500,000 worth of building was done here. There are two Presbyterian, a Congregational, Episcopal, Catholic, Norwegian, Methodist, Swedish and Lutheran churches here, all of which have pastors and are in a prosperous condition.

The educational facilities of Duluth are excellent, there being one high and numerous ward and private schools. A fine new school building, to cost $15,000, is being erected.

The harbor of Duluth is as good as is to be found on the chain of lakes, and the traffic is constantly increasing, as the wants of the population of 70,000 or 80,000 in the mining and lumbering settlements of the south shore of Lake Superior come to be more generally supplied from Duluth. There are now agencies of seven lines of steamboats in the city. For the rest, Duluth, as a manufacturing, receiving and distributing centre, is alive and full of business, conscious of her possibilities and confident of her future.

ated, on the Fergus Falls, and also on the St. V. div. of St. P., M. & M. Ry. The projected line of the B. H. R. R. (Pelican br.), will have this city for one of its termini. Although of but recent origin, Fergus Falls is admitted to be the banner city of the Red River valley. It has, during the past two years, more than doubled its population, and its various industries have advanced in proportion. In 1880, when the previous edition of this book was published, it contained 1,500 souls, now the residents number 3,000, and are constantly being augmented. The Red river here furnishes some of the finest water power in the state, which is partially utilized by various mills and factories. Among the business interests of the city are 2 banks (aggregate capital $125,000), 3 newspapers—Journal, Independent and Banner—several good hotels, and a full complement of shops and stores. Here also are 7 churches and good graded schools. The city is municipally governed, and has efficient police and fire departments. Its eligible location, in the heart of the finest agricultural and lumbering region of the world, coupled with the energy and thrift of its citizens, have induced its rapid, and, at the same time, steady growth, and its future as the metropolis of this section of the country is assured. Exp., Am. Tel., W. U. Stage to Detroit City tri-weekly, and Perham semi-weekly, stopping at intermediate points. Mail, daily. George Nichols, postmaster.

HASTINGS. Advantageously located at the junction of the Vermillion river with the Mississippi, in the eastern part of Dakota county, of which it is the seat of justice. It is distant from St. Paul 20 miles, and from Minneapolis 31 miles, on the C., M. & St. P. Ry, (River div.), and is the eastern terminus of the H. & D. div. of the same road. This, with the transportation facilities afforded by the Mississippi river, make it a shipping and receiving point of great importance to the surrounding country. Hastings, with its population of 3,644, is one of the most beautiful cities on the Mississippi river. The plan of the city is most attractive. The business streets are lined with fine brick blocks, and the residental district is rich with palatial villas. The Vermillion river, on the south side of the city, forms a beautiful cascade as it falls into a deep gorge, and its power is utilized by 3 flouring mills. The manufacturing and mercantile interests of the place are extensive, and rapidly increasing. Among them are furniture factories, saw-mills, machine and other shops, 6 hotels, 3 newspapers, the Gazette, New Era, and the Union, and a bank, one of the most reliable in the state. The religious requirements are provided for by 9 church edifices, 1 Presbyterian, 1 Baptist, 2 Methodist, 2 Lutheran, 2 Catholic, and 1 Episcopal, and the educational facilities consist of 8 public schools, having 20 teachers. A good public library is also a feature of the city. Financially, Hastings occupies a good position. Its bonded debt is $90,000, and it has an assessed value of $1,250,000. Many improvements have recently been made, the cost of which in the aggregate amounts to nearly $100,000. The court house and school building are both fine specimens of architecture, and attract considerable attention. The exports are chiefly flour, grain, and lumber. The soil in the vicinity is rich and productive, and land is valued at from $20 to $35 per acre. Stage to Prescott, Wis., daily; fare, 25c. Exp., Am. and U. S. Tel., W. U. Mail, daily. The first settlement appears to have been made here in 1850, a postoffice was established in 1853, and the city charter was granted in 1872. The business features comprise 2 steam flour mills, foundry and machine shops, 4 wagon manufacturers, several hotels and wholesale stores, and the usual number of retail stores, artisan shops, etc. Two banks, the Lake City and First National, transact considerable business, and two newspapers, the Review and Independent, are published. A large agricultural area both in this State and Wisconsin is tributary to the commerce of Lake City, and shipments of flour and grain are very extensive. Connection is had with Wisconsin by steam ferry in summer and an ice bridge in winter. Seven church edifices, representing the various denominations of Baptist, Presbyterian, Congregational, Methodist, Episcopal, Catholic and Lutheran, are the religious facilities, and education is well provided for by a good graded school, employing 10 teachers for 500 scholars. A public library is also maintained, and the city boasts an efficient fire department. Stage to Mazeppa tri-weekly.

ness interests of the city are manufacturing, mercantile and agricultural. There are several flouring mills and machine shops, an agricultural implement factory, feed mill, planing mill, linseed oil works and woolen mill, using steam power. Three large flouring mills are propelled by water power derived from the Blue Earth river. There are a number of establishments requiring no motive power, such as breweries, potteries, brick yards, etc., besides a full representation of all the various professions and callings. The two national banks transacting business here are the Citizens' National, with a capital of $70,000, and the First National, with $100,000, besides which a private bank is in operation. The press is ably represented by four journals, which are edited with spirit and ability, and are very popular. They are the Review, Free Press, Public Spirit and a German sheet, the Beobachter. The religious and educational features of the city are of the most ample character. Fifteen church edifices, representing all the chief denominations, are sustained, and the public school system comprises 3 buildings and a high school, employing 21 teachers and having an enrollment of 1,100 scholars. In addition to the public schools there is a Catholic college and the Sisters of Charity have a school erected on a commanding site overlooking the city. Mankato is also the site of the State Normal school, one of the three in the State, which yearly graduate numbers of teachers. A public library and an opera house are here. The city is well built, presents an attractive appearance, has many fine business blocks and residences, maintains a fire department, and has a good water works. The assessed valuation is $2,047,569 and the bonded debt $110,000.

An extensive, well settled and productive agricultural area is tributary to its commerce, and the exports of the place are necessarily varied. They consist chiefly of wheat and flour, while some stone, lime and farm produce is shipped. Unimproved land can be purchased at from $8 to $20, while farms command from $10 to $50 per acre. Exp., Am. Tel., W. U. Mail, daily. Orville Brown, postmaster.

MINNEAPOLIS. The county seat of Hennepin county and the headquarters of the flour manufacturing interests of the United States is situated at the head of the navigable water of the Mississippi, at the outlet of the vast timber region of the Northwest and of the great western grain producing country. In 1837 the region was a wilderness, save for a Government mill erected in 1822 for the convenience of the garrison at Fort Snelling. In 1838, Franklin Steele, upon the ratification of the treaty by which the Indian lands between the Mississippi and the St. Croix were ceded to the Government, made the first claim, and built a "claim house" of logs on the eastern bank of the Mississippi, just abreast of the Falls of St. Anthony. Calvin A. Tuttle followed, further down toward the University, and after him Pierre Botineau, nearly opposite the head of Nicollet Island, who both erected log claim houses. French squatters next took up claims, which Mr. Steele purchased, and in 1847, when the land had been surveyed and put into the market, he entered it at the government price of $1.25 per acre, obtaining control of all the water power of the east channel of the river. In 1849, when the Territory of Minnesota was organized, the population of St. Anthony and Little Canada, together, was reported at 571 souls, all told. The first lumber mill, one with two saws, was built in 1848. The town site of the "Village of St. Anthony's Falls" was first surveyed in 1849, and during the legislative session of 1850 the State University was located at St. Anthony, though its erection was not commenced for several years afterward. The first white child was born on April 30, 1851, and the first court of justice ever held in Minnesota organized here in 1849. In 1850 the population was 1,000. In 1854 the first flour mill at the Falls was established, and the first suspension bridge thrown across the Mississippi. In 1855 the Territorial legislature chartered the city of St. Anthony, and the first meeting of the council thus established was held on April 13th of that year. In the same year the west side, which had been a portion of the military reservation of Fort Snelling, was put into market and opened up for entry and settlement, and almost immediately developed from a community of "squatters," without title, into a thriving village most advantageously situated by nature, and rich in scenic beauty. In 1873 the east and the west sides were united in one city by legislative enactment, and the name of Minneapolis given in perpetuity.

Figures showing the steady growth of Minneapolis, from a straggling village to its present metropolitan proportions, form an interesting feature in a statistical review of the city's history. In 1845 the village boasted a population of 50 souls. Gradually, yet steadily, the population of Minneapolis township expanded to 1,000 in 1854. In 1857 the population of the village was 2,000, having increased nearly 800 in 2 years. In 1860 it was a village with a population of 5,809; in 1870 it had risen to 13,066; in 1880 to 48,053, and in the present year the careful census of the directory canvassers give a population of 60,250—showing a percentage of growth from all sources in 11 years of more than 350 per cent. Minneapolis has doubled its number of inhabitants every 6 years, and its growth during the last 12 months has been far in excess of that ratio. The percentage of growth from 1870 to 1880 surpassed that of any other city of its size in America.

The reasons for the wonderful progress of Minneapolis, a progress almost without a parallel in history, are not difficult to find. The magnificent power furnished by the Falls of St. Anthony, located as they are in relation to the almost unlimited expanse to the west and north, of the richest country in the world, is the main factor in the city's growth. Men of intelligence and capital could not fail to realize its immense importance, and to profit therefrom. In connection with the enterprises dependent upon this power, have grown up a host of minor industries, a list of which would be found to comprise almost everything in line of manufacturing, with the single exception of glass. No better idea of the extent of the city's business can be given than that conveyed by the statistics published by the leading dailies on the opening of the year, of which the following is in large part a condensation.

THE FLOURING INTEREST.

The chief manufacture of Minneapolis is flour, it being the largest milling centre in the world, and it is well known by the fame it has attained for the superiority of its flour. A dozen years ago this branch of industry was quite meagre, but by the introduction of improvements in the process of manufacture, by which middlings, previously constituting a part of the offal from wheat and regarded as of comparatively little value, were converted into finer grades of flour, milling was revolutionized. By these improvements the hard varieties of wheat common to the Northwest were made superior for milling to the soft kinds, whereas they had been previously considered inferior, and thus opened a market to stimulate to greater proportions their production. Being made in Minneapolis, these improvements gave our millers an advantage, and consisting of active and progressive men, they have, by study and experimenting, retained a supremacy toward a greater perfection of the process of making flour. Several radical changes have been made within three or four years in the system of milling, and the millers on St. Anthony's Falls have always been conspicuous in bringing them about. Lately mill-stones have been largely superseded by rolls in Minneapolis, what is known as the "gradual reduction" system being employed. At present there are 22 flour mills in Minneapolis, with a total capacity of 17,000 barrels in 24 hours. Had not fire destroyed four other mills on December 4th we would have had a daily capacity of over 20,000 barrels. Three of these mills are being rebuilt on a larger scale, and will fully make up for the capacity of the four destroyed. One other mill is in process of erection, which will have a capacity of 1,000 barrels, and we know of still another that will be enlarged about 500 barrels. When these additions are made, which is promised before another crop is marketed, there will be 26 merchant mills on the Falls, with a daily capacity of nearly 21,500 barrels. The motive power of all these mills except one, the smallest, is water, furnished by the Falls of St. Anthony. The amount of wheat required to feed these mills for one day, if all were running to full capacity, would be over 100,000 bushels. Besides the merchant mills, there are several feed mills in the city, not taken into consideration. There are also one or two mills outside, owned by residents and business men of Minneapolis, which are not taken into account. The report of the secretary of the board of trade for 1880 shows the output of flour by the mills of Minneapolis and two others outside, owned by residents of the city, to have been 3,629,687 barrels; wheat received, 16,937,375 bushels; wheat shipped out, 479,775 bushels; leaving as the amount ground by our mills, 16,457,600 bushels. The same authority gives the following information—Flour shipped from Minneapolis, 1881, 3,189,837 barrels, against 1,551,789 for 1879; wheat received for 1881, 15,863,200 bushels, against 7,514,264 bushels for 1879; wheat shipped, 1881, 479,775 bushels, against 177,400 bushels for 1879. Within a short time Minneapolis will have an elevator and storage capacity for nearly 4,000,000 bushels.

LUMBER.

Next to flour milling the manufacture of lumber is the largest manufacturing interest in Minneapolis. This industry shows a rapid increase, as a comparison of figures for the years 1880 and 1881 will prove. The amount manufactured for the two years is as follows:

Total cut, 1881.....	230,608,834	49,253,700	88,768,500
Total cut, 1880.....	191,882,349	33,505,450	74,891,550
Increase.....	38,726,485	15,748,250	13,876,950

Sales for the season of 1881 were greater by 66 per cent than in 1880, having been in the latter year 158,058,812 feet, and for the year 1881, 252,853,318 feet.

OTHER MANUFACTURES.

The variety and vast extent of the products of the country of which Minneapolis is the outlet, the increasing needs of its population, the rare facilities for manufacturing which exist about her site, and the boundless energy of her citizens, have all combined to place her in the foremost rank of manufacturing cities in all branches. The workers in iron and brass and the machine makers alone have turned out during the past year $4,300,000 worth of goods. The cooper shops have supplied the mills with $1,525,000 worth of barrels. A grand total of $47,345,139 worth of manufactured articles has been produced within the city during the past twelve months. Six thousand six hundred and seventy-one men and women have found employment in the larger shops and factories, and the demand for skilled labor in many branches has exceeded the supply. Many available factory sites have been utilized; many new ones selected—29 new buildings for manufacturing, outside the flour mills, having been built or started within the year, representing an investment of nearly $400,000. The increase in business over 1880 has been marked in all directions.

THE JOBBING TRADE.

The geographical position of Minneapolis and its relation to the great railroad system of the State, makes it a natural point for a trade centre, and this fact is now almost universally recognized. Capital is every day seeking investment, and while the number of jobbing houses is rapidly increasing, and the old established firms are adding to their capital and seeking more extensive quarters, the supply does not exceed the demand. The present standing of the city in this respect can not be better illustrated than by the statement that the wholesale trade for the year 1881 amounted to $83,876,984.00. For the year 1880 the amount was $58,469,679.00, showing an increase for the year 1881 of $25,407,305, or 43 per cent. Three firms transacted a business approaching nearly two millions each for the year.

BANKS.

The extensive banking business of Minneapolis is transacted through the medium of 9 institutions, namely: First National, capital, $600,000; Northwestern National, capital $500,000; Security Bank of Minnesota, capital $1,000,000; City Bank, $500,000; Citizens' Bank, $50,000; Farmers and Mechanics' Savings Bank; Hennepin County Savings Bank, capital $100,000; Bank of Minneapolis, and the Commercial Bank (private).

REAL ESTATE AND BUILDING.

The demand for houses and stores has been so great that it has been found profitable to improve all property purchased, and but very few of the transfers have been made solely for speculative purposes. The growth of the city has been in all directions, and large tracts of outside property only a year ago sold by the acre have been platted and the lots have found a ready sale at from $500 to $1,000 each. In a few instances entire additions have been sold during the year 1881, the larger dealers having devised a plan whereby lots are sold at a reasonable price and upon easy terms of payment to persons that would enter into a contract to improve them. The extension of the street railway lines to the suburbs of both the East and West Divisions has also made easily accessible desirable residence portions of the city.

The following is a comparative statement of the values of the transfers for each of the three years past:

Year.	No. of Deeds.	Consideration.
1879	2,412	$3,080,246
1880	3,096	4,548,364
1881	4,366	7,303,428

There has been very little of a speculative tendency in the real estate business, but most of the purchases have been made with a view to actual improvement, and the year just terminated has been the most active of any in the prosecution of building enterprises in Minneapolis. The frontage added to blocks devoted to business purposes reaches the grand total of 5,805 feet, 4,512 feet of which are of brick and stone, three, four and five stories in height. By actual count the total number of houses erected in the city have been 1,598; of these 114 were stores of brick and stone, and 58 of wood; 1,310 are in the West Division and 288 in the East Division. There has been expended for mills and manufactories, $1,014,700; for elevators and railroad buildings, $311,500; for churches, schools and other public buildings, $219,000; for business blocks, $1,112,800; for miscellaneous public and private buildings, $155,500; for residences, $1,951,000. In addition $300,000 have been expended in improvements to buildings previously erected, making a grand total of $5,064,500 for the year's expenditures in building operations.

RAILROADS.

Following is a brief summary of the construction in 1881 incidental to the Minneapolis system:

	Miles.
St. Paul, Minneapolis—Manitoba	261
Northern Pacific	333
Oregon Railway and Navigation Company	225
Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha	178
Minneapolis & St. Louis	89
Chicago & Northwestern	524
Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul	471
Total construction	2,081
Against for 1880	1,478

Minneapolis has connections with the outside world through seventeen lines of railroad, and the recognized importance of this city as a traffic point is such that no new enterprise of the kind is started in the northwest but aims to make Minneapolis a terminal point, or secure connections here with the eastern trunk lines.

The St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway has commenced the construction of a stone arch bridge across the Mississippi, immediately below the falls, to enable it to reach the new Union depot, an enterprise also put on foot by this road, and which is to be located at the junction of Hennepin and Nicollet avenues. These two undertakings, when completed, will be important additions to Minneapolis railroad facilities. Another feature of the year's growth has been the establishment of a transfer station midway between this city and St. Paul, where the great bulk of the transfer business of the two cities is handled. Space would fail in the attempt to give a comprehensive idea of the future railroad possibilities of this city, and it will not be attempted.

The street railway system of Minneapolis is one of the best equipped and managed in the country. It now comprises 6 barns, 6 car houses, 54 cars, and 235 horses. The road began operations in 1875, with 5 miles of track. During 1881, 5 miles of new track were constructed, making a total of 21 miles, which it is proposed to increase during 1882 to 30 miles. It is proposed to extend and improve the road to keep pace with the growth of the city.

Minneapolis expects during the year 1882, to have the pressing want of a hotel adequate to the demands of travel, supplied. The property purchased for the purpose is at the corner of Hennepin avenue and Fifth street. The building will have a frontage of 170 feet on Hennepin avenue, and 200 feet on Fifth street, will be 6 stories high, in addition to a basement story, finished, under the whole house. It will cost, including furniture, about half a million dollars, and will be second to none in the country in its appointments. Another important improvement promised for the present season is the erection of a grand opera house.

In the perfection of her public school system, Minneapolis has taken advantage of the experience of older cities, and now possesses excellent facilities for imparting knowledge, and the schools are maintained as institutions where those who choose may obtain instruction academic in character, without the expense attending a like course in a regular academy.

The churches of the city comprise those of almost every denomination, and as a rule are in an exceptionally prosperous condition. Some of the edifices are, to a striking degree, handsome and costly. About $200,000 have been expended in this direction the past season.

NEWSPAPERS AND MAGAZINES.

The newspapers and periodicals published in the city number 28, of which the following is a correct list:

The Pioneer Press is recognized as belonging to the Minneapolis press, although the mechanical work is performed at St. Paul. The Tribune, strictly a Minneapolis journal, published every morning, except Monday. The Evening Journal is published every afternoon, Sunday excepted. HALLS AND HOTELS.

The public halls consist of the Market House and its halls, the Academy of Music, Pence Opera House, Harmonia Hall, and the halls of the various secret orders. Many fine hotels are in the city, the chief of which are the Nicollet House, Clark House and the St. James.

CIVIC GOVERNMENT.

Minneapolis is governed by a Mayor and Common Council, and has efficient water works, gas works, police and fire departments, and ample street railway accommodation. Its appointments, as a whole, are those of a first-class, well-governed city.

Rents Collected And TAXES PAID for non-residents, by FINNEGAN & CO., Insurance and Loan Agents, 220 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis.

Communication between the eastern and western divisions of the city is had by a splendid suspension bridge, built at a cost of $220,000, distant from the water 30 feet, with blue limestone towers, 675 feet apart, and cables capable of sustaining a tension of 4,860 tons.

The summer climate of Minneapolis is charming. The city is situated on a gently undulating plain, with bluffs on either side, which afford elegant sites for private residences. The Falls of St. Anthony are in the centre of the city, while the city itself is in the centre of the lake region, and within easy access of charming summer resorts. Minnehaha Falls, made famous by Longfellow, in the "Song of Hiawatha," are 4 miles below the city. Lakes Calhoun, Cedar, and Harriet may be reached by the Lyndale Railway, or by steamer. White Bear Lake, 14 miles distant, is a much frequented resort, where excellent fishing is to be had, while Lake Minnetonka is picturesque, and attracts thousands of tourists and excursionists every season.

There are a host of subjects necessarily excluded from this article, all of great importance, but this brief outline of the city's standing to-day, in comparison with the showing of previous years, is sufficient to give assurance that the city will ere long fully bear out the prophecy of an eminent statesman, when he said, years ago, standing not far from here, "Not ten miles from where I stand will at no distant day be located the centre of empire for the Northwest." MILLERS AND MANUFACTURERS

Mutual Insurance Co.

OFFICERS.

E. V. WHITE, PRESIDENT. H. M. CARPENTER, VICE PRES.

V. G. HUSH, TREASURER. C. B. SHOVE, SECRETARY.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The name of this company implies the kind of business done. The charter granted this company by the State of Minnesota reads upon "Mills, Manufactories, Elevators and their contents." The company can take nothing else. It is in fact the only mutual insurance company in the West whose charter defines its business, so that any one can see at a glance the kind of risks the company will write upon. A purely manufacturers' mutual insurance company has "never made a failure." There are good reasons for this, as they confine their business to the better class of mills and manufactories, limiting their lines, scattering their risks, so that no two will expose each other, thus avoiding conflagrations; taking only good and responsible parties; employing no agents on commission; no dividends to pay stockholders, are some of the principal reasons why mutual insurance companies succeed. Parties having first-class property who value same more standing than in ashes, well insured, and want indemnity at actual cost, would do well to address

C. B. SHOVE, Sec'y.
